Diagnose with Divots and Ball Flight

One of the hard things about the game of golf is our inability to see ourselves in action. That's why we need to take advantage of all available clues. The direction of your divots is a clear indicator of what you are doing with the club, and even more so is the ball's flight. A divot mark cutting from right to left relative to your target line is the result of an out-to-in swing path. This path produces pulled shots when the clubface alignment matches it, or a left to right slice when the clubface is open to it at impact. The opposite divot mark shape, from left to right relative to your target line, indicates an in-to-out swing path. This causes a push when the clubface alignment matches the path, or a right to left hook when the clubface points left of it at impact. Knowing what you are doing with the club at impact is key to playing your best golf. Your divot marks combined with the ball's flight pattern are sound indicators.

Each two-man team will play the other two-man teams in their respective flights. The format will be four-ball match play with each team using their better ball against the better ball of the other team. Each team will play five 9-hole matches within their flight. Flights and seeding within flights are determined by total team handicap indexes. On Saturday afternoon, individual flight champions, along with a "Wild Card Team" will compete in a five hole "shootout" to determine the overall Champion. The shootout format will be modified chapman played on holes 14-18.
